Street food around the world

Budi, Indonesia

A warung is a small wooden kiosk at the side of the road which sells cooked food. There are different warungs for fish dishes, chicken dishes, and others. My favorite is nasi goreng, which is Indonesian fried rice with vegetables and a fried egg on top. Everyone likes eating at warungs so they're a great place to meet people, too.

Marisa, Brazil

People in Brazil work long hours and don't have a lot of time for breakfast. Usually we stop at a café in the morning on the way to work to have some coffee and some pão de queijo. These are small balls of bread with a lot of cheese inside. They're delicious! The café makes them fresh every morning and they're a great way to have a quick breakfast.

Tamara, U.S.

When the weather's nice in California, people like to eat outside at food trucks with their friends. We usually go to the farmer's market here in Sacramento on Saturdays. There are a lot of different types of food trucks selling local and international dishes. My favorite is the Mexican food: it's delicious but can be quite hot!
