Markets of the world

A

St. Lawrence, Toronto, Canada

This farmers' market has operated since 1803 and, at first, for a brief time, it was situated inside Toronto's city hall. It was redeveloped between the 1970s and 1990s, and today the area's mix of homes and businesses is a great example of successful urban regeneration. More than 120 retailers sell everything from seafood to coffee to antiques. The market is located in Toronto's old town, and only open on Saturdays.

B

Castries Market, St. Lucia

Opened in 1894, and still occupying the original, orange-roofed building, this market in St. Lucia's capital is the island's largest and loudest. Island spices, such as cinnamon, can be found there, as well as breadfruit, bananas, and other tropical fruits. You can also get good deals on beach clothing and it's a great place to try hot, spicy food. The market is open daily, except for Sundays, but is best on Saturdays.

C

Ver-o-Peso, Belém, Brazil

Open daily, this market is noisy, and incredibly atmospheric. Hundreds of different fishmongers can be visited here, each selling strange-looking fish. The market is located along the river front of Belém's Ver-o-Peso port. Visit early in the morning, especially on Saturdays and Sundays, when fishermen unload their catch. It's great to watch.

D

Mercado Central, Santiago, Chile

Dating from 1872, this lively market is known for the amazing variety of fish and seafood on sale. Many locals come to eat rather than shop, however, as onsite restaurants offer delicious dishes like paila marina. The market attracts plenty of tourists too, and some stalls sell handicrafts and other souvenirs. The market is two blocks north of Santo Domingo church and opens early each day.

E

La Vucciria, Palermo, Italy

In a part of Palermo that only locals know how to get to easily, La Vucciria is more Middle Eastern than European. Musicians bang drums and sing Arabian songs, and the smell of barbecued sausages and kebabs is everywhere. The name of the market comes from the French word boucherie (butchers') but expect everything from fish to fruit. La Vucciria is off Piazza San Domenico and rarely closes. Take a local guide with you to show you around.

17 Read the descriptions. Match the statement to the market (A–E). Write the correct letter.

- 1 This market is not typical of markets in the region. _____
- 2 This market can only be visited on the weekend. _____
- 3 The writer suggests that the prices are good in this market. _____
- 4 This market only seems to sell fish and seafood. _____
- 5 The writer suggests that this market tries to appeal to both local people and visitors. _____

18 Read the descriptions. Are the statements True, False, or Not given?

- 1 The farmers' market in Toronto hasn't always been in the same building and has probably changed a lot since it first opened.
True / False / Not given
- 2 The market in St Lucia is well-known for selling a much wider range of products than any other market on the island.
True / False / Not given
- 3 The writer explains exactly when you should go to the market in Belém and why you should do so.
True / False / Not given
- 4 The writer says tourists are more likely to visit restaurants than do any shopping in the market in Santiago.
True / False / Not given
- 5 The writer suggests the market in Palermo is not a place that many tourists visit.
True / False / Not given
