Four ways to ask

You are going to interview four people here at school. Same subject, four different questions. Build them before you leave this room.

BEFORE YOU ASK

Excuse me, could I ask you four questions for my English class?

and at the end: Thank you very much!

Never ask an adult how old they are. Ask about the time instead: when you were my age ...

1 DIRECT QUESTION

How often do you call people on the phone?

Question word, then do, then the person, then the verb.

MY VERSION

2 SUBJECT QUESTION

Who texts you the most?

When who is the subject, there is no do. Same order as a statement.

MY VERSION

Who

3 INDIRECT QUESTION

Could you tell me how you kept in touch with your friends when you were my age?

Polite. After the question phrase, the words go back to statement order.

MY VERSION

Do you know

4 TAG QUESTION

You didn't have a cell phone at school, did you?

You already think you know. Flip it: negative sentence, positive tag. The tag carries a pronoun.

_____ , _____ ?

The four people

Ask everybody the same four questions. Short notes, English only.

PERSON AND JOB	1 · PHONE CALLS	2 · WHO TEXTS	3 · AT MY AGE	4 · WAS I RIGHT?

5 Back in class

Say it, then prove it with something a real person told you today.

- The people I talked to _____.
For example, _____.
- The most surprising answer was _____.
- My guess in question 4 was _____, because _____.

REAL TALK

Indirect question não é uma pergunta diferente: é a mesma pergunta com uma almofada na frente. Where is it? vira Could you tell me where it is? A almofada muda a ordem das palavras, e é isso que você paga para soar educado com um adulto que você não conhece.
