Interview with a Young Scientist

Jan: Hi Sophia, what have you been (1) study / studying / studied recently?

Sophia: (2) I'm / I'll / I've been reading a book about predators. It's great! There's a really interesting chapter about leopards. These big cats quietly follow their (3) prey / predators / bacteria until they are about 5–10 meters away from them. Then they suddenly run forward really fast to catch them. Did you know that leopards can run at nearly 60 kilometers per hour?

Jan: Wow, that's amazing! What else have you been reading about?

Sophia: I've (4) be / been / being studying bacteria. That might sound boring, but bacteria are really useful! Bacteria in the soil help dead plants and animals to (5) digest / balance / decompose, which means they're broken down into very small parts. It's important because it helps new plants to grow.

Jan: Oh, I see. I just have one last question for you: what's your favorite animal or organism?

Sophia: It's an unusual choice, but I love (6) vultures / worms / deer because they eat soil and let air and water into the ground. If we didn't have these little animals, then plants wouldn't grow!
